TOWN OF ANDOVER, MASS

After years of advocating for her son, Jennifer Warren decided to follow her passion for advocacy. Her mission is to steer families through the challenging special education process, demonstrate advocacy skills, and help them achieve appropriate special education services for their child. With her guidance, parents will become an informed part of the IEP Team while saving them time and stress. Jennifer trained with the Federation for Children with Special Needs (FCSN) and the Council of Parent Attorneys and Advocates (COPAA). She regularly attends professional development opportunities to stay current and expand her knowledge. www.warrenadvocacy.com

Holly Vietzke-Lynch, Esq. graduated from Boston University and Massachusetts School of Law, magna cum laude. She was a full-time professor at the Massachusetts School of Law for 17 years and currently serves on the North Andover School Committee. Holly also spent five years serving on the board of her town's SEPAC (an advisory council of parents of children with special needs) and has a deep understanding of the challenges both parents and schools face in special education. She is a member of the Council of Parents, Attorneys, and Advocates for Special Education (COPAA) and the Special Education Advocacy Network (SPAN). As the parent of a child with disabilities, Holly is passionate about ensuring that every child receives a meaningful education. www.hollylynchlaw.com
